A note from Rudy...

Greetings Fellow Downtowner Readers. My name is Rudy. I will soon be writing regularly in this newsletter. Randy Allman and company read something I've written recently and were quite pleased with it. (I don't know what one would call it, an essay or what not. It definitely was too big to be considered an aphorism.) They saw I had a talent, especially Randy, who offered me a spot on the newsletter staff. I couldn't say no.

So, what are the subjects I will be writing about? Well, a common theme will be Asperger's Syndrome, a mild form of autism. Asperger's is something I have. I "have" it, mind you. I don't really consider myself suffering from it. It's usually the prejudiced attitudes that people have towards those living with Asperger's Syndrome that can be painful. So I feel the natural obligation to educate the general public on AS. In doing so, I will do through journalism. I may not always follow the rules of proper English composition (although I can whip off something that can make any English Comp teacher smile.) There may be a run-on sentence here and/or there or some other imperfection. However, I will always have something interesting and important to say.

You'll be hearing more from me soon. Take care.
